

Abstract of the Disclosure

Reuse distance is the number of data which are accessed between accesses of a datum.

The computation of reuse distance uses a search tree and is carried out through approximate analysis, pattern recognition, or distance-based sampling. The reuse distance can be used to 5 detect reference affinity, that is, to detect which data are accessed together.